'Script Link' to Help South Asians in Film Industry

The Mahindra Indo-American Arts Council has selected 14 screenplay writers to participate in its first annual "Script Link," a symposium to help writers of South Asian descent network with the film industry at large.

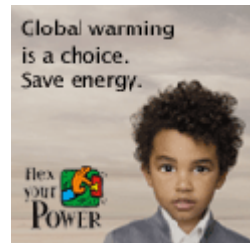

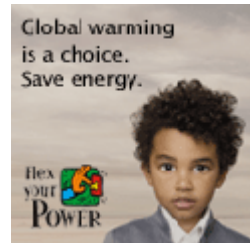

The writers, selected according to their potential or established talent, include "Amu" director Shonali Bose, Amu Gopal and Priyanka Kumar.

Participants will interact with film industry professionals such as directors, investors and agents during Script Link's Nov. 8 and 9 run, which falls during the 2007 Mahindra Indo-American Arts Council Film Festival running Nov. 7 - 11 in New York.

In addition to networking, the writers will take part in panel discussions headed by industry veterans. Among the topics for discussion are "Where's the Money?," "Now What?" and "Where's the Audience?"

The film festival, in its seventh year, will take place in cinemas across New York City. For venue and film information, visit iaac.us/seventh\_film\_festival2007/.
